The School of Music at the Louisiana State Normal School.

In keeping with the growth and development of the Normal School in material and scholastic lines, has come expansion in opportunities for cultural growth.

It was but natural that the demand for the refining influences of that most universal of arts—music—should be met through the providing of increased facilities for its study and enjoyment. The opening of the present school year saw the reorganization of the music department, and the establishment of the School of Music.

In order that the school may rank with similar institutions, more comprehensive courses of study have been provided, the teaching force augmented, and new equipment added. No effort has been spared to bring to the school the highest type of teaching ability and musicianship. The department is fortunate in the artistic strength and strong personality of its faculty, thus insuring patrons the best results obtainable.

The school is under the direction of Prof. J. Browne Martin, a graduate of Bucknell University and of the Leipzig (Germany) Conservatory, and who has also studied under eminent New York and Philadelphia masters. He has been prominently identified with such institutions as the Pennsylvania College of Music, Baker University Conservatory, and the Des Moines Musical College. Prof. Martin's work as violinist, theorist, teacher and director of musical organizations, has the endorsement of such eminent authorities as Dr. M. L. Bartlett, Thaddeus Rich of Philadelphia, Charles Watt, Holmes Cowper of Chicago, and Emil Oberhoffer, conductor of the Minneapolis Orchestra.

From the Music News of Chicago: "Mr. J. Browne Martin is known throughout the Middle West as a musician of the most pronounced gifts and of the finest acquirements. He is considered one of the most notable additions to the city's (Des Moines) music profession in many years." Prof. Martin will give instruction in violin, piano, theory, and the history of music, and will also conduct the school orchestra.

The vocal department is in charge of Mrs. Helen Yates-Martin, who is a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Music in voice and piano, and a former pupil of celebrated New York teachers, including the noted operatic tenor, Ellison Van Hoose. Mrs. Martin has also studied opera and oratorio under the direction of the eminent authority, Prof. Alfred J. Mooney. She has concertized with great success throughout Eastern and Middle Western states, and for the past three years has been one of the leading concert singers of Iowa. The critic of Music News, Chicago, says: "Helen Yates-Martin possesses a beautiful clear soprano voice of much brilliancy and warmth which has been brought to a high degree of artistic merit. She is a singer of captivating personality."

Miss Edith Mae Bundy, of the piano department, is a graduate of the Drake University Conservatory, a pupil of Lois Adler of Chicago and of George Frederick Ogden of Des Moines. Miss Bundy is a pianist who has achieved much distinction by her artistic work as a soloist. For the past four years she has been instructor at the Drake University Conservatory, where she was eminently successful as a performer and teacher. Her concert appearances have attracted favorable comment from press and public. Her playing is characterized by brilliancy, artistic finish, and sound musicianship. In the capacity of instructor, Miss Bundy has had unqualified success.

Miss Mary Louise Dickinson of the piano department is a graduate of the Normal Training Department of the American Conservatory of Chicago. She is a pupil of Victor Garwood and has devoted much of her time to methods of teaching, accompanying, and juvenile training. Miss Dickinson is an excellent accompanist and successful teacher. She has enjoyed an enthusiastic following of students, whose progress has reflected much credit upon her ability.

Thorough courses are given in all the leading branches of musical art: piano, voice, violin and other orchestra instruments, theory, harmony, history of music, and ensemble playing. One of the aims of the school is to provide systematic courses for the complete musical development of the student. The complexity of musical art is such that the student who would become proficient must add such theoretical studies as are best adapted to advance him in his chosen subject. This school recognizes the indispensable benefits accruing from a knowledge of these subjects, and that a practical presentation of their basic principles means a sound musical foundation, increased power, more rapid advancement and appreciation of music, without which the highest attainments are impossible.

Two private lessons per week are given in the major subject of instrument or voice, in which attention is given to the building of technic, cultivation of tone, interpretation, phrasing, memorizing, etc. Class instruction is given in all theoretical branches of music. A stimulating musical environment is made possible by frequent concerts by visiting artists and faculty members, and by lectures and illustrated talks upon musical topics. Frequent recitals by pupils of all grades are given, and the art of public performance seriously studied and practiced. Every effort is made to develop pupils in accordance with the most approved methods; to create an appreciation of the best musical literature and the highest ideals in the art.

Aside from its purely departmental relation to the Normal, the Music School provides an opportunity for the general student-body to become more intelligently appreciative of the best music. The Music School becomes a factor in the higher moral, social, and cultural growth of the students, through the refining and uplifting influences of the art.

The Normal Orchestra, consisting of full string, wood-wind and brass sections, offers the experience and routine necessary to become an efficient orchestral player. All pupils in the advanced grades of stringed and other orchestral instruments are entitled to membership. Weekly rehearsals are held, and the preparation of classic and modern compositions undertaken for public performance.

The school is well equipped with commodious studios furnished with high grade pianos. The handsome auditorium, seating 750, contains a Steinway Concert Grand piano. Eighteen pianos are provided for practice purposes, four new ones of standard make having been recently added, thus insuring excellent facilities for systematic practice. A Victor talking machine, with a large collection of records, is used for purposes of musical illustration.

The extremely low cost of tuition (less than half that of other similar schools) prevents no one from obtaining first-class training in any branch of music. Many free advantages not found in other schools are provided, which, together with ideal surroundings, combine to make music study at the Louisiana State Normal School equal to that of the foremost schools of the South.

The Necessity for Trained Rural Teachers.

PROF. C. J. BROWN,

Supervisor of Rural Schools.

Within the past few years there have been incorporated into our educational theories several very important principles which will radically change the nature of the school as to its physical condition and equipment, its course of study, and the teaching processes. These guiding principles are so comparatively new and have been developed so rapidly that as yet our practice lags quite a distance behind what we believe to be fundamentally true. One of the really big questions of today is how to catch up with the "new education" theories which the people and educational leaders demand.

A survey of present conditions and an investigation of the beliefs of leading school people would doubtless convince any one of some fundamental changes in standards as to the functions of the school; it might be difficult to believe that these newer ideas have the deep hold that I feel they have if one confines his investigations to actual demonstrations in the school room. The school system is so extensive, precedents of generations are so hard to overcome, and the changes necessary to meet these newer standards require such increased revenues, that it will be some time before we can make the adjustment. The greatest handicap, however, in effecting the regeneration of the school in accord with our present theories is the lack of teachers properly trained as to subject matter and point of view. This is particularly true of those found in rural schools.

Perhaps the most important principle, the most far-reaching in its possible effects when put into general practice, is that the school must reflect the life and activities of the community in which it is located. This principle, put into practice, will do more to increase the value of the school to society, to prepare more definitely for genuine service to self and others, than any of the other recent acquisitions into our educational thought. Let us examine somewhat into the meaning of this principle.

Briefly, it means that the major activities or industries of a community must find a place as organized subjects in the course of study; the minor activities are to be given such a place in the work of the school as their relative importance demands. It means that instead of spending time on a study of facts foreign or loosely related to the life needs of the particular community, preference must be given to facts of local economic and social significance to the children. In a farming section, for instance, it would mean that the farm, the farm home, and the subordinate related activities should constitute a large part of the study of the children at school; that in a lumbering section, that business with all its related minor activities would occupy the important place in the course of study. This principle means that there must be as many wires up between the school and the community as possible and that these wires shall be kept constantly busy with messages; that instead of confining the child's thought within the four walls of the school room, it shall compass the community, to the end that he may establish such relationships with his environment as are necessary for his success in life. These illustrations make clear the principle which has been definitely and almost universally accepted as a guide in the future development of our school system.

As I conceive it, the chief aim in this close relationship between the school and the community and home life, is not to prepare children to follow the occupations of their parents, although experience teaches us that a great majority of them will do this, especially as to agriculture. The real reason is that one's success in life depends upon his "awakeness" to the world about him; the quantity and quality of his service to himself and others depend upon his ability to see and appreciate the significant elements or factors in his life and environment; the making of a living depends upon the readiness with which he may adjust himself to new or changing conditions; he is most alive who is most alert to those phases of the world's activities touching him most closely. One's future development, his success in whatever life work he may undertake, depends upon an extensive and intensive life experience in his childhood and youth; he must early learn how to select from the multitudes of facts and the thousands of activities about him, those having real significance; he must bring order out of what is apparently a series of unrelated facts and events. The only way to do this is to educate him into an understanding of this life and these activities, rather than to isolate him from them and confine his attention to abstract facts.

There are other important values incident to the chief one mentioned. The industries thus studied are gradually raised by such study to higher and higher levels, becoming more profitable and in every way more desirable occupations; the life thus studied and better understood is more appreciated and its ideals are raised; as a reaction from such studies, the occupations themselves are improved. A careful study of the life around one will also tend to develop a more stable and substantial order of society; it will decrease shiftlessness and the tendency to rove.

Let us see how the application of this principle will work out in Louisiana. Ours is largely an agricultural state; the natural possibilities for development in this direction lead us to believe that this great industry is just in its beginning. If Louisiana is ever to become a really great state it will be as a result of its agricultural development. With this in mind, the pedagogical reasons for introducing agriculture and related activities into the school become stronger. No doubt a larger and larger proportion of our population will follow this vocation, most of those at present living in the country continuing to live there, being supplemented by numbers from the towns and lumber sections. No other industry deserves so great an attention on the part of the school from whatever point it is viewed; it is inevitable that agriculture will become incorporated into the school work.

But this is for the boys of the country sections; this principle applied to the girls' education is that a study of the organization and management of the home shall constitute a part of the course of study. This proposition is so evident as to render argument unnecessary. The question now is how to get these major activities of agriculture and home making, with the minor related activities, put into actual practice. Our present status is this: we school people and the general public have accepted this guiding principle as true and are anxious to put it into general practice as rapidly as possible; we must have changes in our educational plant for this work, requiring considerably increased revenues; we need teachers with the proper training to undertake this kind of work. We are getting the necessary revenues and equipment much faster than we are preparing the teachers; this order of procedure should be reversed, and the preparation of teachers should proceed much more rapidly; already superintendents are anxious to have teachers with even the rudiments of an education in this direction, for their rural schools.

What preparation is necessary on the part of the teacher to meet the demands of the occasion? It would certainly be preferable, if it were feasible, to have teachers with a broad and comprehensive knowledge of the rural subjects mentioned; for many reasons, however, this is impracticable at present. What, then, may reasonably be expected of the rural teacher for the next few years in the way of preparation to meet the demand already mentioned?

In the first place, he must have such an academic education as will fit him for teaching effectively the tools of learning; he must then have some understanding of the larger and more important problems of the farm and the farmer; he must know by experience much of the work of the farm; he must understand the general principles of the science of agriculture; in general, he must be qualified to lift both the farmer and farming to a higher level, both as to ideals and profits. If a lady teacher, she must have many of the same qualifications demanded of the man, and in addition must know how to manage a home and improve its condition. The need is for a practical education, which will include a study of rural conditions as they exist, to the end that life in the country may be made both more profitable and more pleasurable. It is evident that such teachers as are needed in great numbers just now can not receive college courses of four years; it is better that most of them receive some insight into the rural needs and how they may be met, than that a few know all these things thoroughly. The most that the average rural teacher can do at present is to initiate lines of investigation and thought among rural children and their parents that will gradually lead them towards the desired end. It is with this in mind that the State Normal School a year ago inaugurated a rural teachers' training course.

The kind of training offered in the past and in many cases in the present is academic in character and is given with little or no thought to the many vital needs of rural life and people, nor to establishing that close and necessary connection between the child and his environment; it attempts some of this in theory, but it results in little that is applicable when put to the test. Such a course as is mentioned can not be effective without being demonstrated to a large extent. With this amount of explanation it is easy to understand the reason for all phases of the course offered in the Normal School.

Teachers of this course are given a broad and sound training in the academic subjects; they are offered both study and experience in soils, fertilizers and tillage; in forage and general farm crops; in gardening and fruit growing. Both study and work in connection with farm animals, dairying, and poultry raising are included in the course. The boys have considerable work in the shop with tools and upon problems common to the farm. The girls study and practice the science and art of cooking, the making of clothes and the general management of the home. All students, men and women, study rural economics with special application to the rural problems of this state; they also study sociology with the same aim in mind. The professional work includes rural school management, touching on those vital problems upon which the improvement of the rural school depends. The entire course aims to fit teachers for rural schools; it is believed that any of its graduates can go into any rural community, and really understand its local problems and its possibilities; they can determine the proper function of their particular school with reference to local conditions, and will have enough knowledge of rural subjects to awaken pupils and parents to an appreciation of their problems and get them started towards their solution. This is as much as we can reasonably expect just now; before many years we will want teachers who understand in greater detail many of these rural subjects, and by that time this school will be preparing them with this in mind.

The rural training course should have several hundred boys and girls in it; they would be able to find positions with relatively high salaries at their graduation. The openings are all over the state, and those prepared to fill them are lacking.

Louisiana State Normal School Library

MISS SCHARLIE E. RUSSELL,

Librarian.

“New conditions bring forth new problems and demand new solutions.” Libraries in some form are almost as old as history; but the ancient university library with its priceless manuscripts, illuminated texts, and stores of marvelous scientific specimens, all fit only for the scholar's use and enlightenment, gave no promise of the modern school library. Printing, though, was then an unknown art, and it was no uncommon thing for a student to walk hundreds of miles, perhaps begging his way, to read some book securely chained to a pillar. But the volume which then "cost as much as a village has by the new process become as cheap as a lunch."

So the old plan of education whereby the child was taught a subject from one text book, and the college student restricted to the learning of one man, imparted in the form of lectures, has broadened in proportion to the constantly decreasing price of books. So that the text book now affords to the wise teacher only a nucleus around which he groups fourfold as much information as a child could get from one source; and the university lecturer gives the student only an outline, which he is required to fill out and amplify by a vast deal of independent reading and research.

Therefore, an adequate library is to be recognized, not as something desirable, but as an absolutely necessary complement in any satisfactory normal school organization; for it is here that our future teachers are to learn not only how to amplify the instruction given to them, but also how to guide the child to search for himself. Consequently, the demands on a normal school library are large and exacting.

It has been a problem in ours to meet these demands with any sort of adequacy, having only very limited space and necessarily restricted facilities. The principal problem has been how to use to the best advantage the material at our disposal, and contrive that this material serve the purpose of as many students as possible. To this end we have found it convenient to compile and keep bibliographies of the subject matter in the library on those topics repeatedly assigned to the students for study, jotting down references as new books and magazines are examined before preparing them for the shelves. It has been necessary, also, to limit the length of time that those books constantly used for research and study may be kept from the library, lending them only at the end of the day and requiring that they be returned the following morning. We can be sure in this way that no book which is in great demand will be out of use in one student's room when another student is in need of it. On the other hand, such a plan makes it feasible to allow a borrower the privilege of taking more than one book for this short period of time.

Aside from the 2830 volumes which the library contains, one of the greatest sources of information that it affords is the accumulated periodicals of previous years. We subscribe to over one hundred of the best magazines published and have recently adopted the policy of binding the most used of these after the year's subscription expires. These bound volumes are placed upon shelves easily accessible to the students, and the unbound numbers are kept carefully organized, so that any one of them can be readily found when called for. With the assistance of that most indispensable of all library reference books, the "Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature," there is opened up to the student a great deal of valuable material that he finds useful in many branches of his work: useful to the literary societies in preparation of debates, essays, orations, declamations, etc.; to the discourse classes in preparing the several kinds of required themes; to the literature classes in the critical study of the works of different authors; and to the professional classes as supplementary material in their teaching.

Of almost equal importance are the government bulletins when organized and classified. This is done according to subject and not by numbers, so that one who is in search of material on "Arbitration," "Philippine Independence," "The Tariff," "Boll-weevils," or "Forest Preservation," may be readily supplied with all bulletins on any one of these subjects without tracking them down by their numbers.

Under the old order of things, where our library space was very limited and often overcrowded beyond its capacity, it seemed wise to supply students with the material they needed in the quickest way and get the mto work as speedily as possible and with as little confusion. Therefore, very little could be done in teaching library organization and classification. However, now that we are in somewhat roomier quarters and have finished the work of classification and cataloguing according to the system which obtains in the first libraries of the country, we hope to reach eventually the standard of the best normal school libraries. As a step in this direction, we have begun in a small way to give incidental instruction in the arrangement of the books in the library, the system of classification, and the use of the catalog; for we recognize with the authorities on this subject that no teacher is fully equipped for his work without a knowledge of some part of library economy, as well as of the best sources of information, and a certain degree of ease in looking up material. He also needs to have something of what is called the librarian's knowledge of books; that is, know titles of books, subjects of chapters, and the general manner in which they are treated. He should be familiar with the principle guiding the wise choice of books for a small library, and have a working knowledge of some simple system of classifying, cataloguing, numbering, arranging, and distributing books. For, the teacher, when he goes out to work, will have one of three problems confronting him: how to use the public library, how to administer and use the school library, or how to organize and build up one.

One can readily understand that this important phase of instruction cannot be left to chance. Therefore, many normal schools have found it expedient to give regular lessons in the most necessary branches of library organization and economy, requiring outside preparation as in other studies, and making this work, as well as pedagogy, psychology, or practice work, a requisite of graduation. This condition, however, must come to us, together with better library appointments and facilities, added space for the segregation of the different library departments, and a children's room with appliances and material suitable for work with young people.

The accomplishment of this ideal, we hope, will not be far distant, for it is commensurate with the development of the other departments of the Louisiana State Normal School.

A Word to Our Alumni.

The officers of the Association send New Year's greetings to the great band of Normalites throughout our own and other states. We hope that "it is well with you;" that good health, happiness and large opportunity for social service are yours. We want to hear from you and be assured that these matters are realities with you. Will you not write to us, if only a card to let us know where you are and what you are doing?

This issue of the Normal Quarterly contains the Alumni roll; a statement of the business conditions of the Association will appear in the next issue.

The Alumni is doing a greater educational work than any Association of its kind in the state. It is developing strength as an organization and its members are carrying the high educational ideals of the Alma Mater to every town and hamlet in our commonwealth. Homes, other professions and business itself are being enriched by the enlightened sympathies and trained activities of our people.

Let us stand by our Normal School; her ideals and her purposes. She is the mother of the modern public school in our state; our first institution to foster the higher education of women; she has given opportunity to hundreds of young men to make their way to higher and better things. She is still working for the social betterment of our native state. With her assistance our future is secure and the good work for the childhood of Louisiana will go on.

The Problem of the Rural School

The census of 1910 showed the population of Louisiana to be 1,656,388. Of this number 496,516 live in cities and towns, and 1,159,872 live in rural territory. In other words, 70 per cent of the people of Louisiana live in the open country, and it is but fair to assume that 70 per cent. of the children of the State live likewise in the country.

The education of these children along lines that will insure the development of a strong, healthy, prosperous and contented rural people is at once the most important and the most immediate educational problem of the State.

That the country schools are not using the splendid opportunity which is theirs, to the end that country boys and girls may interpret their surroundings, realize their needs and meet them, no one can deny. Through what power, then, is the narrow, hidebound, inefficient rural school to be transformed into a mighty power for the improvement of farm and home, for the amelioration of country conditions, and for the enlargement of rural life? Can new life be added through human agency, and a new power infused into the rural school, whereby the untold possibilities that lie around it may become realities? The conviction that such power lies in SUITABLY TRAINED TEACHERS is the force that impels men to labor for the upbuilding and development of our rural civilization.

The first essential for success in building the country school into a mighty agency for social good is the right viewpoint. Betts in "New Ideals in Rural Schools" says, "The successful rural teacher must be able to identify himself very completely with the interests and activities of the community; nor can this be done in any half-hearted, sentimental or professional manner. It must be a spontaneous and natural response arising from a true interest in the people, a knowledge of their lives, and a sincere desire for their welfare. Any preparation which does not result in this spirit, and TRAIN IN THE ABILITY to realize it in action, does not fit for the rural school." So long as the rural teacher conceives his sole mission to be to teach reading, spelling, arithmetic, geography, history and writing, he is essentially a failure, although his salary be satisfactory and his patrons pleased. Unless the teacher sees the opportunities that surround him, knows how to utilize them and is ready and willing to make a large personal sacrifice for the social good, he is doomed to fail in his most important function. A suggestion at the right time;

*A new type of country school, made possible by a prosperous farming community.
What manner of instruction will develop a class of farmers who provide schoolhouses like this for their children?*

persistent discussion of principles and facts which are scientifically correct; patient and continued instruction of farmers, their wives, sons and daughters; actual labor in home or on farm when necessary; a close acquaintance with the patrons of his school; an intimate knowledge of the interests and needs of individuals in the community; these are a few of the ways that open to the country teacher for rendering that larger social service.

But the teacher who lacks proper training and education is not competent to lead the people of his community along the better way. If he has not made a study of farm animals, their care, improvement and breeding; if he is ignorant of the production and handling of milk and milk products in the approved sanitary ways; if he is ignorant of poultry raising; if he lacks a knowledge of swine and sheep husbandry;—then, the whole world of live stock is as a sealed book to him and he is bereft of a vast power for service. So, a knowledge of sanitation, insects, horticulture and labor-saving devices, is essential to this larger service.

Agriculture, in its varied aspects, is neither a mysterious art nor yet an unfathomable science; and the teaching of it involves no particular difficulty. Many schools and colleges are today training men and women in agriculture and rural industries in a most successful manner. The teaching of agriculture, however, in rural schools necessitates the reorganization of our system into a scheme of education imbued with common sense, and endowed with possibilities for practical good. The country school must be rural in its spirit as well as in its geographical setting.

The young teacher hesitates to utilize his knowledge of the sciences as applied to agriculture, because perhaps he knows little of the practical side of it; but it must be remembered that the knowledge most needed by farmer boys is not so much how to plow, as when, how deeply and why; not so much how to use the harrow as when to use it and how it acts to conserve moisture; not so much what to feed stock as what proportions of the several feeds to combine so as to produce the most economical and best adapted ration. And, the teacher who, through persistent effort has induced one farmer to build a dipping vat for his cattle or saved his hogs by the use of cholera serum, has thus taken a long step toward commanding the confidence of his farmer patrons. The teacher who does a work like this will occupy a position of influence and power for good.

The great essentials, then, in training teachers for service in country communities are: first, a broad course covering the various phases of rural problems, industrially, socially and educationally; second, a clear grasp of the social status and the needed changes which will alleviate the conditions; and third, confidence and determination in one's purpose to better rural conditions.

In attempting to give the prospective rural teacher a proper training, and to inspire him with the right attitude for his work, the Louisiana State Normal School found it best to use, as the nucleus of the course, the subjects hereinafter described.

The Rural Training Course

AGRICULTURE.

Before the teacher is in a position to work intelligently among the people of a rural community or even to conceive of the work to be done, it is necessary that he have a knowledge of the principal means through which these people obtain their daily bread; so that the course in agriculture aims, first, to place the student in close touch with his work, and then to give him such technical knowledge of the subject, as will enable him to improve the material welfare of those for whom he is to labor.

In the 1B, 1C, 2A, 2B, 2C and 3A classes, are given: Soils and fertilizers, farm and forage crops, gardening, farm arithmetic, animal husbandry and dairying in the order named. It will be seen that here the study of the student proceeds from the source of all sustenance, through the great staple products and the methods for their cultivation, to the several other products and by-products of every well-operated farm.

After classifying the various soils and learning of their physical properties, the student begins a study of plant food materials contained therein and the means of collecting and utilizing these elements through the judicious use of a proper water supply and tillage. Thus he is led to appreciate the soil as something more than dirt. He is also taught how to supply materials often lacking in the soils by the use of commercial fertilizers.

A detailed study is made of the staple crops of the South. These crops are studied from the standpoint of the small farmer.

Practical rotations are worked out, bringing in the use of legumes such as peas, velvet beans, and lespedeza. The selection, testing and storing of seeds furnish excellent laboratory work. The student also has practice in corn judging.

While in all the work already described practical field study is used, it is in gardening, animal husbandry and dairying that the most individual work is used for the training of Pruning and tying up tomatoes. The students have practical work in harvesting and canning this crop. Good prospects for tomato club workers.

the student. This is especially true of gardening where the student has an individual garden which he plants, cultivates, and harvests.

ANIMAL HUSBANDRY AND DAIRYING.

The work in animal husbandry (see cover page), includes a comprehensive study of farm animals. In this work there is open to the prospective teacher a splendid field for stimulating interest in this much neglected phase of farm industry in the South. The Normal School is well equipped with dairy cattle, work stock, swine, poultry, barns, poultry houses, incubators, etc., all of which are used in giving a concrete turn to the work of the rural training course.

The course in dairying offers intensive study of the dairy breeds, their care, management and feeding. The student has practical work in making the Babcock test for fat, and studying a dairy herd under ideal conditions. The best cows of the herd are used for practice in judging. Here the student learns the conformation of a good dairy cow and sees how this conformation proves out in practice.

FARM ARITHMETIC.

Between the courses in gardening and animal husbandry, farm arithmetic is taught for the purpose of giving the student a means for the working out of problems in balancing rations, mixing commercial fertilizers, standardizing cream, and solving general farm problems of a mathematical sort.

(A rare specimen)

The most beautiful jewels of nature's creation had no charms before they took nature study.

NATURE STUDY.

In order to put the student in touch with the active world of insects and plants, open his mind to the beauties of nature, and make him appreciate out-of-door life, a course in nature study is given in the 3A class. In this work it is more a question of attitude and interest than one of technical knowledge; however, a simple classification of common insects is made, and some of the common weeds studied along with their natural means of propagation and the best artificial means for their control.

The work varies each term on account of the season. In fall, the study of seeds and seed distribution takes a large share of time; while in spring the study of wild flowers is more interesting. While the aesthetic side of nature study is not neglected, it must be remembered that the economic phase is of importance also.

The State stands in greater need of homes such as these women will make than it does doctors and lawyers. Why not teach the girls of the country schools the art? Cook stoves can be had in any home and fuel is without cost. Did the teacher in your school study domestic science or Roman History?

Sewing machines and simple tables like these can be had in any community. Trained teachers are in great need.

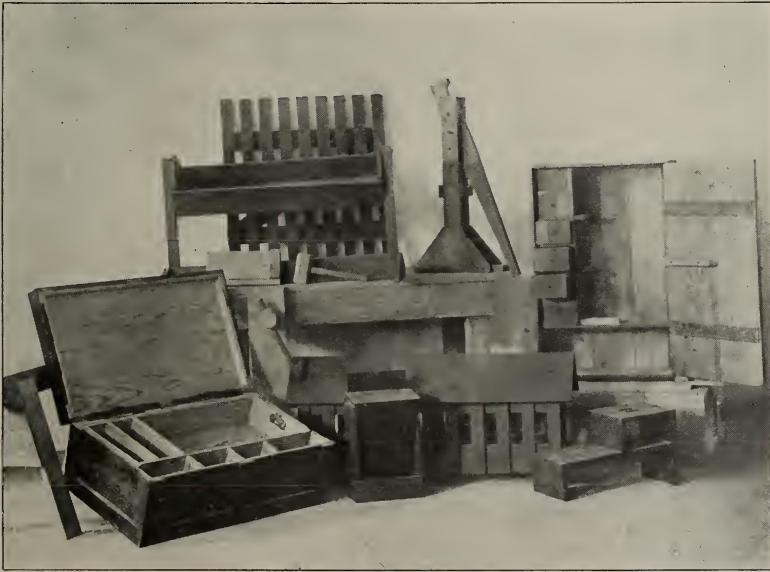

DOMESTIC SCIENCE AND ART.

If the teacher in the rural school interprets the farm as a business enterprise alone, he fails to see the most vital side of country life. The farm is not only a means of making a living, but it is a place for living—it is a home; and any scheme of education which does not train for better home-making is weak at its very foundation. So, a course is offered whereby the young ladies may learn, not only how to cook and sew, but how to do so with the greatest efficiency and economy. They must learn household management and sanitation for the art of home-making is only begun at the cook stove and sewing machine. The sick must be cared for, the wearing material must be selected, the labor must be supervised, the furnishings and decorations must be planned and selected, and the home kept comfortable and attractive. Through the 2C, 3A, 3B, 3C and 4A classes instruction is given in these things, and the greatest interest is manifested by those pursuing this work. No community can employ a young lady who has had such training and not improve in the art of home-making.

FARM SHOP WORK.

The work of this department has two definite purposes. The first is to teach the student how to care for and use correctly the different tools and machinery found on the farm or in the work shop, and to perform the different constructions. The second purpose is to enable the prospective teacher to make objects which are needed in the home and on the farm, and in this way prepare him to train country boys for greater service and efficiency. These purposes do not conflict in any way; for, it is as easy to teach the correct use of the plane in making a gate or a tool chest as in making a foot-stool or a library table. The following objects are made by the students taking this course: feed boxes, trap nests, brooders, swings, ladders, slides, wagon jacks, milking stools, gates, porch swings, broom holders and harness clamps. In addition to the work in wood the shop course includes plumbing, forging and farm machinery, the laying and connecting of pipe lines, and attaching faucets; installing a hot and cold water system; and simple work in handling iron. Special emphasis is laid on the care of farm machinery, for it is a well known fact that as much deterioration is caused by carelessness and neglect as by use.

FARM SHOP WORK.

Useful things made by students of the course in rural training.

ECONOMICS.

The study of economics offers an opportunity for the student to obtain a comprehensive view of the general problem of production and distribution, and at the same time make an intensive study of some of the vital questions affecting industry.

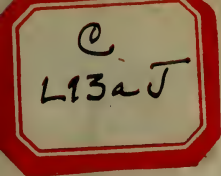

During the first quarter, a complete study is made of our resources in land, labor and capital, and their close relation and interdependence. In their proper order are studied in detail, the extent and development of our natural resources from the standpoint of past achievements and future possibilities; then the question of the laborer is taken up from the standpoint of his immediate service, and the effect of his advancement. In connection with this, various economic programs are discussed with a view of giving each prospective teacher an acquaintance with present day efforts for the general amelioration of those conditions which detract from the best relations of the different factors in industrial development.

In the second quarter a course is given in rural economics beginning with a perspective of the relation between the rural community and the economic world about it. Problems of credit and market are discussed with a view of giving the student a broader vision of the possibilities of co-operative credit and marketing associations. Many other problems affecting rural society are discussed in this course.

RURAL SCHOOL ORGANIZATION.

Here the student is taught how to organize the school and put to work all of the existing factors for better country life. The school is the center, and must perform whatever work there is to be done, if there exists no other organization which can do it better.

The question of school laws, taxation, architecture, etc., as well as grading, grade limitation, consolidation, transportation and sanitation are discussed.

THE TRAINING SCHOOL
Louisiana State Normal School

J. E. GUARDIA, Principal

PURPOSE AND ORIGIN.

The training school of the Louisiana State Normal School is that department of the institution in which the normal students obtain their first practice teaching. This practice teaching is done under the immediate supervision of regular members of the Normal School faculty, who criticise the work done and who are therefore known as critic teachers. The practice teaching is restricted to the last year of the normal course, and is systematically planned and organized, and is carried on daily.

The training department, generally called the model school, had its origin in the very beginning of the Normal School in the fall of 1885. It appears that the lowest classes of the school were used for practice purposes. Later, probably in 1888, the practice school was more definitely differentiated from the normal department; and in that year we find an enrollment in the practice school of 82. This school comprised only three grades, the first, second and third. The educational field between the third grade and the normal classes was covered by the model ungraded school.

ITS PRESENT EQUIPMENT.

The training school has today a faculty of ten teachers, eleven grades and an enrollment of about three hundred. Most of the children are from the town but some forty-eight or fifty come an average distance of three miles in four transfers. For many years the training school occupied half of the first floor of the main building, but in April 1913 it was moved into a home of its own.

The building, erected from the proceeds of a special tax of 5 mills for 12 years in Ward 1, Natchitoches Parish, is a great addition to the Normal campus and is one of the finest school buildings in the State. The three-story brick structure is ninety-five feet wide and one hundred and fifty feet long. The simple plan makes it possible to utilize every foot of floor space. The building contains ten large class rooms, with a cloak room each, an assembly hall that will seat four hundred, three manual training rooms, three domestic science rooms, a large gymnasium, a teachers' rest room, a principal's office, a kindergarten room, a well-lighted library, thirty-six smaller rooms for practice teaching, lavatories, shower baths, and locker rooms, and wide halls extending nearly the entire length of the building. The class rooms are furnished with adjustable desks and the assembly room with opera chairs. Automatic buzzers are being installed in each room. A lunch room in connection with the domestic science work, where simple hot lunches may be served almost at cost, is a dream soon to be realized.

THE COURSE OF STUDY.

The course of study in the training school is essentially that outlined in the state course of study for elementary and high schools. In several cases the state course has been supplemented. In the high school English, the work has been rearranged. The course in physiology and hygiene has been extended from twelve to eighteen weeks. Geography and literature in the intermediate grades have also been strengthened. At present, the faculty of the training school and the teachers of the professional subjects in the Normal are engaged in writing out the training school course of study. It will be published in full in a later issue of the Normal Quarterly.

MANUAL TRAINING.

Special attention is given to manual training. The shop is a well lighted room in the basement and is equipped with eighteen benches and sets of individual tools, and an assortment of general tools and supplies. The small rooms are used for lumber and unfinished models. The work is offered to the sixth and seventh grades and the high school. The student is taught to use correctly and adjust all the common wood working tools so that he will be able to make any common object needed around the house. The different tool processes are taught, not as separate exercises, but as parts of operations used in constructing useful objects.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

Emphasis is laid on domestic science because it pertains to every department of home making and not merely to the cooking of meals. It includes household economics, the science of cleaning and of hygiene, the care of the kitchen, kinds of food and their proper preparation. Since this subject embraces so much and means so much to health and happiness, it is essential that at least an elementary knowledge of this science should be a part of every girl's education. To give this knowledge is the aim of the domestic science work in the high school. The girls in the lower grades, beginning with the sixth, learn sewing. They are taught to cut, fit, and make simple garments and to patch and darn. The work in both intermediate and high school departments is of a very practical nature, and can be readily applied to the home life.

THE HOME AND THE SCHOOL.

The training school, however, recognizes the need of a closer relationship between the school and home even in the grades lower than those in which domestic science is taught. The widening breach between the home and school is one of our present day problems.

To meet this, an organization known as the "Home Builders" seeks to draw the work of the school into such close relation with that of the home that one would be but the complement of the other. The training school has an active circle of this organization that meets once a week. The girls tell what they have done at home and receive an honor for each task faithfully and cheerfully performed. Eight kinds of honors may be won,—in home cooking, cleaning, sewing, planting, culture, health, decoration, and “little things.” Girls from eight to fourteen years of age are reached; and the expense attached to membership is so small that no child is too poor to be a member. The Home Builders is a club work that is a deep pleasure to pupils and teachers alike. The rules, regulations, steps for organization, and all minor details necessary to make it a success are simple enough to be carried out by any teacher who has the best interest of her pupils at heart.

THE SCHOOL GARDEN.

The school garden has more than justified the claims of its most enthusiastic supporters. The aim of the training school in this work is to give the children a practical working knowledge of the principles of gardening. Each grade, from the first through the seventh, is given a generous amount of ground which is divided equally among the girls and boys of the grade. They plant common vegetables, such as turnips, radishes, carrots, beets, lettuce, peas, spinach, onions, and tomatoes, and a few of the hardier flowers. The seeds are furnished by the school. The implements used are well suited to the size of the children. Class room study of soils, tillage, pests, etc., is correlated with the garden work. Home gardening is encouraged.

THE SCHOOL CLUBS.

The training school puts emphasis on the literary society. Each elementary grade above the fourth has its literary organization with the usual officers except the treasurer. No dues or fines are levied; non-performance of duty causes the delinquent to forfeit his right to attend the regular Friday afternoon meeting, the teacher substituting some other work for him to do at that hour. Programs that have a general theme running through them and are based as much as possible on the regular school work, are made out by the program committee, assisted by the teacher, the right to appear on the program being esteemed as a privilege. The high school literary society is thoroughly organized and carries on its work in strict accord with parliamentary law. The greatest amount of freedom consistent with good results is allowed this organization and some excellent work has been done. A conspicuous number on each program is the working out of a parliamentary topic followed by a parliamentary law drill to fix the facts. In this way, many of the high school students have become well versed in the art of presiding. The wild flower and bird clubs do work in the spring and summer along lines suggested by their names.

DAILY OPENING EXERCISES.

Each grade conducts its own morning exercises four days out of the week, but every Wednesday the entire school assembles for a twenty-minute period. About five minutes is given to assembly singing, led by the director of the School of Music, and the program is turned over to the teacher in charge of the day's exercises. Talks on various topics of interest, musical numbers, and dramatizations by the children have been enjoyed at this period. Announcements pertaining to the welfare of the school are made at this time.

SPECIAL DAYS.

Closely related to this work is the celebration of the holidays. The aim in this work is to give prominence to the spirit that each day embodies. At Thanksgiving, the idea of universal celebration was brought out when the whole school assembled and the harvest festivals of the nations, ancient and modern, were represented by different groups of children. Christmas, being a fireside festival, was celebrated by the grades in their respective rooms. On each of these occasions the children gladdened the hearts of those less fortunate with appropriate gifts. The celebrations to which we now look forward are Arbor Day, Lee's Birthday, and an open-air spring festival.

DAILY INTERMISSIONS AND ATHLETICS.

Recesses are important and should not be neglected. In the training school, a total of fifty minutes is given to two recesses, a ten-minute intermission occurring at 10:45 and a forty-minute lunch period at 12:25. When the weather is favorable, all children leave the building during these recesses and most of them spend the time at play and games in which the teachers frequently join. The older children have base-ball, basket-ball, and foot-ball paraphernalia and the younger ones are provided with see-saws, swings, a slide, a merry-go-round, and a sand pile. When weather conditions prevent the enjoyment of these out-door amusements, the children assemble in the gymnasium for games of all sorts. A teacher is always in charge. Special periods are devoted to basket ball, tennis, etc., according to the season. Picked members of the normal varsity team act as coaches. Contests between grades and with several high schools of Natchitoches Parish are the only match games the training school has had this year.

THE LIBRARY: EQUIPMENT AND USE.

Of all the departments of the school, there is none that the girls and boys feel to be more peculiarly theirs than is the library. It was with them that the idea of having a library all their own originated; it was by their efforts that it was realized. It is maintained by a library association, the members of which pay an annual fee of fifty cents. All the children use the library, but only those who have cards may take books home. This makes the library self sustaining. The library room, one of the best in the building, is fitted up with tables, chairs, bookcases, shelves, and a bulletin board. The room is made attractive by pictures and flowers presented by classes and by individuals. On the shelves are books of travel, adventure, history, myths, inventions, stories, poems, etc. The pupils are aided in their reading of the daily papers by the bulletin board, which notes the most important happenings of the day. Volunteer librarians are selected from among the normal and high school students, and these have charge an hour each day. The library is open throughout the day. A faculty committee selects the books, appoints all necessary committees, directs the financial side of the work and conducts a story hour twice each week. The boys and girls often speak of the library as their treasure house.

USE OF TRAINING SCHOOL FOR PRACTICE TEACHING.

The practice teaching referred to in the Normal course is done in the training school. Just how this work is conducted need not be told here. Suffice it to say that the large new building which the training school now occupies has almost revolutionized this work insofar as physical equipment is concerned. When an old graduate returns to the Normal, her attention is immediately attracted by three comfortable recitation rooms that open into each grade room. Here the student teachers take their classes of ten or twelve and have a comfortable place for conducting recitations undisturbed. This arrangement is in striking contrast to the old, when three, or sometimes four classes were compelled to recite in the grade room at one time, with the fifth uncomfortably tucked under the hall steps. It is now possible to present to student teachers some of the most important features of class control. Among the problems that have become recognized subjects for study as a result of this improvement in equipment are: How to meet the physical needs of the pupil; the necessity of having what every sane teacher demands for her class, comfort and reasonable privacy; and that most essential feature of mechanical discipline, the handling of moving classes.

MEDICAL AND DENTAL INSPECTION.

With the opening of the new year, another long step forward was taken. It was the establishment of medical and dental inspection throughout the grades. The need of both is evident. This improvement was made possible by the public-spirited dentists and physicians of Natchitoches, who give generously of their time and skill to carry on the work. One of the best ventilated and lighted rooms in the building has been fitted up as the medical inspector's office. Three hours each week are devoted to the free examination of eyes, ears, nose, throat, heart, lungs, etc. The card system of records that is used is very simple. First a card is sent to the parent, notifying him that at a certain day and hour his child will come up for medical or dental inspection. In order that the best results may be obtained, he is urged to be present if possible. The record of the dental examination shows the condition of the mouth in rather full detail and gives advice as to what should be done to remedy the defects. In order that the record may be full and yet require but the space furnished by a library card, the wording is somewhat technical. This card is filed with a copy of the notification to the parent. A third card bearing a diagram of the mouth that shows every tooth, both deciduous and permanent, is sent to the parent. Teeth that need attention are marked; recommendations as to cleaning, treatment, mouth washes, etc., are made; and the parent is urged to have the work done. A duplicate of this card as well as of all others sent to the parent, is filed. It is gratifying to know that there were good results before the first week ended, for a dentist reported that several children went to him with the request that he "fix their teeth before their time for the examination at the training school." Other children whose dental records revealed to them how badly their teeth needed attention expressed their intention to have the work done at once.

The medical inspection is done similarly. The notification for it is sent out as before, with the same request that the parents be present at the examination if possible. This request has been cheerfully complied with by a number, and many who have not been visitors on the normal campus for years have been drawn there by special interest. The card calls for answers to detailed questions as to eyes, ears, nose, throat, lungs, heart, scalp, height, weight, etc., number of hours of study, sleep, bed room windows open, baths per week, vaccination, children's diseases, etc. This card is filed and a similar card stating the result of the examination is sent to the parents with the request that they see the family physician if the defects are such as require medical attention. The plan is to have the dentists and physicians give illustrated lectures later. The care of the teeth, eyes etc., proper sleeping, bathing, eating and other important topics will be discussed. Several of the dentists have volunteered to do dental work for indigent students for the cost of the material required. That medical and dental inspection will go a long way toward correcting much backwardness in students and making their bodies stronger and cleaner and their lives healthier, no one will doubt for an instant.

FOREWORD

The Louisiana State Normal School presents this little pamphlet to the public with a hope that readers will obtain some idea of what it means to belong to that group or community residing on Normal Hill. Ideas so obtained must of necessity be incomplete and the perspective in the average case will be blurred; but, as the articles were prepared in all cases, by members of the organizations or by those in close touch with them, care has been taken that the image formed by the reader shall not be distorted.

While the Normal's aim is to give the prospective teacher something to teach and the knowledge of how to teach, it is not less important that the teacher should know how to lead and to organize. Inasmuch as groups of people are best uplifted by the proper direction of their recreative activities, the successful leader must give much attention to this phase of preparation.

Any interest displayed by the public in the Normal is always welcomed by the authorities whether this interest is shown by a visit or a letter of inquiry. Information in letters and bulletins will be freely given to any interested person by

MRS. RUBY PRICE, Secty.

ATHLETICS

BASEBALL

Baseball is one of the leading athletic activities at the Normal. A school team is developed each spring, which competes with teams of other schools. But since only a limited number of students can take part in these games, inter-society teams are organized and play one or more series of games each spring. Much interest is manifested in these games, and a wholesome, friendly rivalry has developed. Much attention is given to correct form in bunting, sliding, base-running, batting, etc., as well as team work and "inside baseball." It is not the aim of the players to become Ty Cobbs, but to develop themselves into players who know something of the technique of the game, and who are able to coach successfully preparatory school teams.

BASKET BALL

Basket-ball is played throughout the winter quarter. As in baseball, both a school team and society teams are developed. Basket-ball is really the leading high school game in Louisiana; so a special effort is made to develop men and women who can coach this branch of athletics. Thorough drill is given in passing and catching the ball, shooting goals from all angles and distances, and guarding an opponent, special emphasis being placed on the use of the best form. Team play is stressed, and individual attempts to "star" are discouraged in no uncertain terms.

FOOT BALL

In the fall quarter, foot ball is the major form of boys' athletics. All who desire to take active part in the play are carefully examined by a physician, and only the physically fit are allowed to participate in the game. The early part of the season is spent in a thorough drill of the fundamentals of the game, such as passing, catching, and falling on the ball, tackling, kicking, etc. In short, the first part of the season is spent with a view of developing the individual. Then simple, and a little later more complex formations and plays are taught after which time more attention is given to team play. Games are played with neighboring schools of similar rank, and Normal has always ranked high in percentage of games won. IN THE SEASON JUST CLOSED NORMAL LOST BUT ONE GAME AND SCORED 193 POINTS TO HER OPPONENTS 19. The aim of the work in football is to prepare the student to coach football in preparatory schools, to develop the player physically, mentally and morally, and to emphasize the importance of temperate habits.

TRACK

Track work divides honors with baseball as a major form of athletics in the spring quarter. In the usual track and field meet there are thirteen or more events. And it is very seldom that any athlete is able to do more than two or three events really well. A track athlete is very likely to be a specialist for that reason. He may know well how to do one or two or perhaps three of the events, but know nothing about any of the others. Since it is the aim of the department not only to develop a school track team, but also to turn out coaches for the schools of the state, a special effort is made to give each student a good knowledge of the correct form and proper training for all the ordinary track events. At the same time, individual attention is given each student, and a good team has been developed each year. IN FACT, NO NORMAL TRACK TEAM HAS EVER MET DEFEAT. LAST YEAR IN THE L. I. A. A. MEET AT ALEXANDRIA NORMAL SCORED 64 POINTS WHILE ALL OTHER SCHOOLS ENTERED SCORED 41.

INDOOR BASEBALL

This is one of the three games recommended by the National Playground Association as safe and sane for all classes of individuals. Its demands upon the players for quick decision and action is almost equal to that of football. As a cure for any awkwardness and a developer of alacrity, indoor baseball is marvelous.

There are thirty members of the class in the Normal and the interest in the game is intense.

PLAYS AND GAMES

The work offered in Plays and Games at the Normal consists of a series of twenty-four lessons. In the first of these, selections of good games, the best from the many books on play, are taught. From these examples pupils learn that an adequate game must hold interest, must employ many, and must afford vigorous exercise.

From the library, then, games are brought in, submitted to this test and presented by the students.

GYMNASTICS

Gymnastics, as the work for this year is organized, follows strictly the Swedish system. Free-standing exercise, light apparatus work, marching and running, are given in proper sequence. The difficulty of exercises increases from lesson to lesson. The aim of this work is to establish and maintain the proper functioning of the organs of the body; and to develop muscular control. No effort is made to bring about bulky muscular development. A well poised, lithe machine, that answers quickly to the command of WILL is the ideal type of athletic attainment.

SWIMMING

In our Summer Swimming, the aim is to develop as rapidly as possible, from two to three hundred persons in this art. The familiar "breast" or "sailor" stroke is given first, OUT of the water; then the adoption is made in the shallow ends of the pool.

Results during the past summer were excellent. Some of the groups, and particularly determined individuals, progressed in one month's time, from the "sailor" to "overhand" and "crawl" strokes, and DIVING.

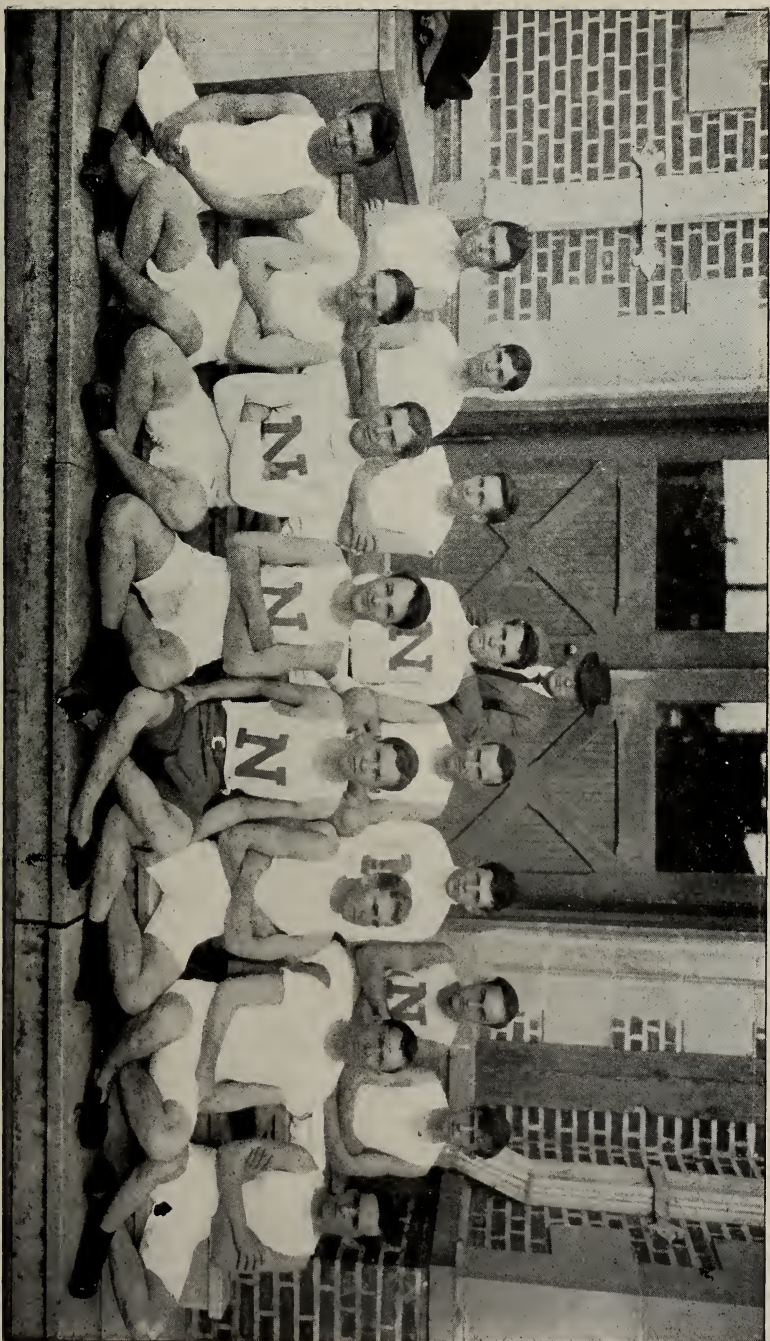

The hours in the pool were voted by many the supreme attraction of the summer quarter.

TENNIS

Tennis is offered as a part of the athletic program throughout the year. The purpose in offering this popular form of exercise is not to develop champion tennis players. However, a number of students have become quite proficient. An attempt is made, however, to teach the rules of the game, the fundamentals of team play, and a few of the most common strokes. This is done with the expectation that the player will continue the playing of tennis long after his or her school days are over.

Each spring a tournament is held, to the winner of which is presented a splendid racket. Tournaments with other schools are also held from time to time.

TRACK TEAM 1913

FOLK DANCING

Some one has said—"the highest expression of art is rhythmic"—in literature, painting, movement,—any other means of human self revelation.

Certainly then, dancing, the poetry of motion, is the highest form of physical exercise. The perfect self-control, the absolute accord of all muscles moving with the ease that is grace itself; the forgetfulness of self in the joy of accomplishment; the lightness and exhilarating freedom of physical expression that dancing above any other form of training can give, are not to be ignored in the plan for a perfect education.

Folk Dancing, as every one must know, consists of the dances peculiar to individual nations, that, especially in Northern Europe, have made up the social life of the peasantry for centuries. These dances carefully express the lives of the people, the high-lights and shadows. They consist of dances of grief, like the Hungarian CHEBOGAR; dances depicting occupations and trades, like the Swedish WEAVING DANCE; and those of purely festal joy, like the early English MAY DANCES.

Aesthetic work in Classical Dancing: Grecian arm movements, foot work intricate and beautiful,—solo dancing, that can depend only upon gracefulness for its effect,—that is the highest type of rhythmic motion. In the short course necessitated by the term arrangement at the Normal, little can be done with this more difficult work.

But the enthusiasm with which our attempts have been received, the delight the girls seem to find in the dancing hour and the tendency of most of them to "work over time," promises a strong department and a great accomplishment for the future. In no great length of time the superintendents of Louisiana will be able to procure fully equipped teachers to offer this work to the State.

DEPARTMENTAL CLUBS.

CONTEMPORARY LIFE.

The Contemporary Life Club is a comparatively young organization in the Normal, it having been founded on December 4th, 1913. The Club was organized by the members of the Social Science course for the purposes which are stated in the Preamble of the Constitution and By-laws of the Club which are as follows:

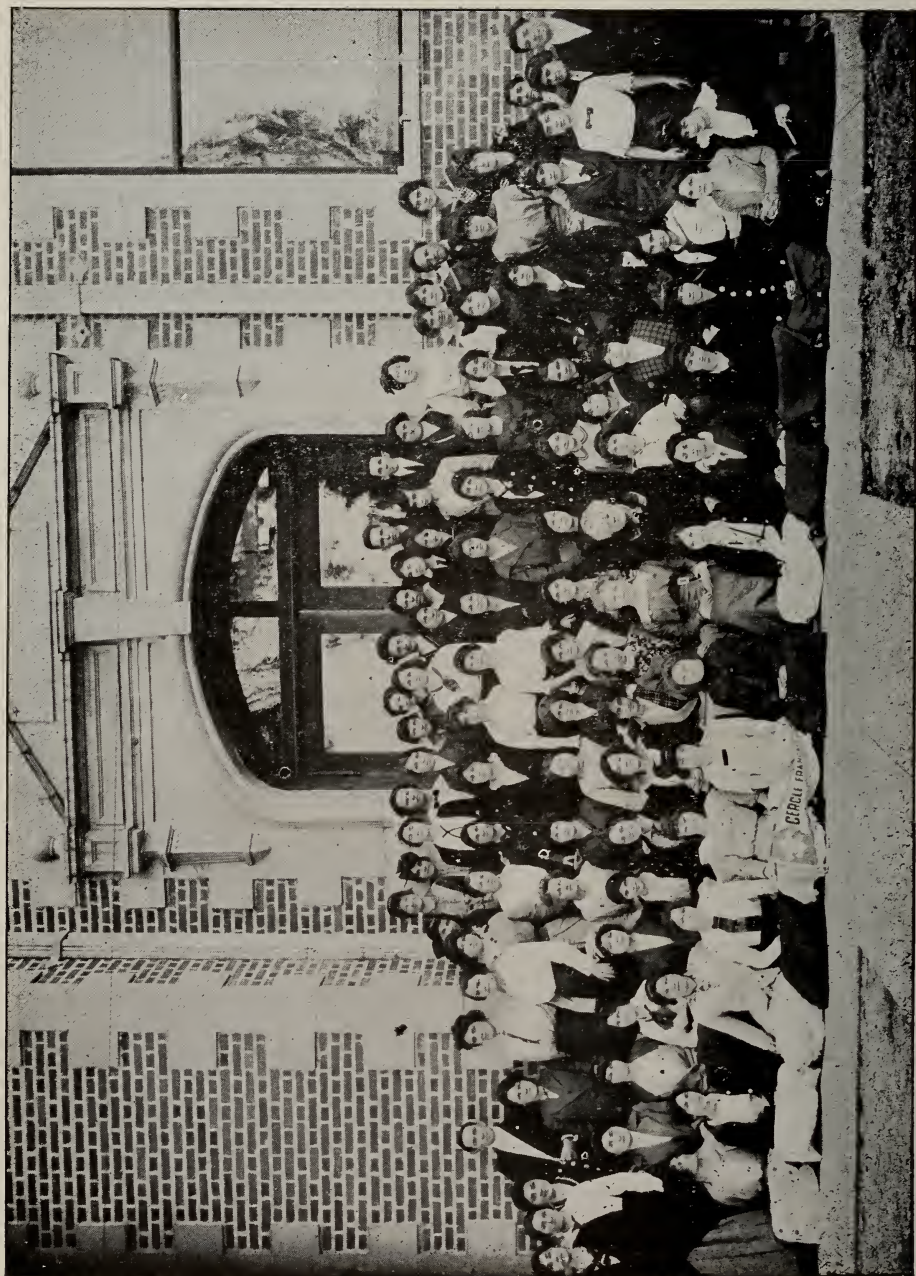

“Desiring to cultivate our intellectual, moral and social endowments, to foster and develop patriotism and leadership and to create a spirit of devotion and loyalty to the Louisiana State Normal School, we, the students of the Social Science Course do hereby pledge ourselves to support the following Constitution and By-laws.”

One extremely interesting number each week is the open discussion of current events. For the past two terms the work has been along the line of the greatest current event, the European War. The history of each of the nations engaged has been studied especially in regard to the causes of the present war; also the immediate effects and probable permanent results have been discussed. Music and Normal jokes add to the program and lighten it.

Another feature of the work of the Contemporary Life Club is the editing of the school paper, Current Sauce, through which a great deal is done in creating “esprit de corps” among the students. It is largely because of its successful efforts along this line in the past that Contemporary Life feels that its existence has been worth while.

The Contemporary Life Club was originally composed of only the members of the Social Science course, but it has lately opened its membership to all those taking social science subjects, however for only the term in which the subject is pursued.

It is the dream of the Club to be able to extend its membership to the whole school and so to make its influence felt throughout the entire student body.

THE FRENCH CIRCLE

LE CERCLE FRANCAIS

The French Circle was organized during the summer term of 1912 for the purpose of bringing the French element into closer touch, fostering in them a pride in their native tongue which will result in an effective effort to redeem it from disuse or from the dialect toward which it has sometimes tended, also giving conversational advantages to the English students, converting what might otherwise be a lifeless subject into a living idiom, introducing its students to the masterpieces of French literature, teaching them French melodies and, by means of pictures and stories, making them familiar with French customs and creating an atmosphere of local color.

That the Circle is carrying out its purposes is attested by the fact that it has an active and growing membership, that after more than two years of existence its members continue to put their best and most enthusiastic effort into it for the good to be derived from it, and that it has created an "esprit de corps" and love for the language among apostles who will go forth in the State and teach once more to its children the language of the Colonists.

THE LATIN CLUB

Several members of the department of Latin met during the fall term and effected an organization which they named the Latin Club, the purpose of which was to gain such a knowledge of the Latin people as cannot be conveniently learned in the classroom.

The Club has a charter membership of fifty, with constitution and by-laws. Very interesting and instructive meetings have been held.

The work of the club is along the line of especial periods of Roman history and different phases of Roman life and customs. The Latin historians are read in the original, thus materially supplementing class-room work. With such a large field of information from which to draw, the Club hopes to accomplish great results from its study of the culture of the wonderful classic period.

Officers for the ensuing term are:

Miss Virginia Prescott, President.

Miss Katherine Marston, Secretary.

Miss Elmira Montgomery, Treasurer.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

THE ECLECTIC LITERARY SOCIETY.

The Eclectic Literary Society, which was organized in 1892, is an outgrowth of the Seekers After Knowledge which had been in existence for two years.

The charter members of the E. L. S. were among the most intelligent and high-minded young people in the older society, and they agreed that the aim of the new organization would be: THE IMPROVEMENT OF ITS MEMBERS:—

- (1) IN THEORY and PRACTICE OF PARLIAMEN-TARY LAW.
- (2) IN WRITING and READING PAPERS ON TOPICS OF MUTUAL INTEREST.
- (3) IN PUBLIC SPEECH and DEBATE.
- (4) IN SOCIAL, INTELLECTUAL and MORAL STANDING.

Realizing that the aim of the society was an ideal one, that much work and responsibility rested on the shoulders of each member in the efforts to reach the goal and that he who labors most earnestly and most willingly accomplishes most, the members set for themselves the motto: "LABOR IS WORSHIP."

Having previously elected its corps of officers, and now having set up its aim and motto, the E. L. S. began to work, not only to accomplish its aim, but to strive strenuously and untiringly to surpass the mother society in the contest at the close of that year. These efforts brought success for Miss Jeanette Richardson won the medal in the debate. With victories in 1893 and 1895, honors divided in 1894 and 1896, and one defeat in 1897, the members felt justly proud of the society's success.

The order of things was changed in 1898 when three medals were offered, but again the E. L. S. won two of the medals, one for music and one for oratory. Flushed with victory and with troops of new members flocking in, the society won medals in the following order: In 1899, two medals were won, and in each of the two years following one medal was captured.

With the advent of the Modern Culture Club into the field in 1902 there were three contestants, but the E. L. S. continued to bear itself proudly, the following contests being won: Tableaux and Declamation in 1902; Declamation in 1904; Declamation and Parliamentary Law in 1905; Oratory in 1906; Oratory in 1907 and Declamation in 1908.

In 1909 an athletic contest was added to the customary literary program, but this only furnished other fields on which to perch the banner of victory; for the E. L. S. won in Declamation and Oratory as well as in the majority of the athletic events.

This gave the society the first claim on the loving cup which had been offered. This cup was completely captured in 1910 when both opponents were vanquished in all the events which took place. Again in 1911 the E. L. S. quartette won a set of chorus books for the society.

For the last three years Dame Fortune has frowned on this society although in 1913 its representative won the medal for Declamation. This is one of the fortunes of war, however, and all members look to the future with confidence, for the E. L. S. is known as the WORKING SOCIETY, and such an organization will not down.

THE MODERN CULTURE CLUB.

The Modern Culture Club is an organization which has grown out of the two older societies, the Eclectic Literary Society and the Seekers After Knowledge. In the year 1902 the increase in number of both the above named societies gave rise to this club.

The aim of the society is to cultivate the intellectual, moral and social endowments, to foster virtue and to promote friendship and patriotism among its members. The motto of the society is: "Through Difficulties to the Skies." The members are all ardent workers, and they allow no obstacle to impede their journey forward. They all march resolved to victory or disgrace when the annual commencement contests come around. The members work in harmony; they show their willingness to work; they are eager to labor for their society; they are anxious to see it grow.

The work and achievements of the Club since its birth are brilliant. The Modern Culture Club before the year 1912 was known as the "baby" society due to its size in comparison to the two more developed ones. The Club has quickly passed through that preparatory stage. Although the Club was handicapped by the fewness of members that was made up for by the quality of these few people. In the year 1903, one year after the society was organized, Mr. C. A. Riddle represented the Club in oratory at the annual contest and won with great honors. In that same year the M. C. C. was again pronounced victorious in having the most efficient and well-versed Parliamentarian. In the year 1904 when the emulatory period again appeared, the Modern Culture Club again captured her share of the honors by winning for a second time—oratory. Mr. J. H. Alford, one of the Club's best workers, in the year 1904 was awarded a gold medal for winning the Ex-temporaneous Speech Contest. The chorus that represented the Modern Culture Club at the commencement exercises proved superior to any other. In the year 1912 the club was successful in winning oratory and The Boys' Quartette over the two other societies. Not only was it successful in winning these two honors, but it also won in a triangular debate participated in by the three societies of the Normal School. During the year 1913 honors were again reaped. Farrar and Alford met the representatives of the other societies, and won decidedly. The year 1914 is one which will never sink into oblivion in the hall of that Club. It was during that year that the sterling qualities of the society were brought to light. It was then that the efforts put forth by the members bore the fruit of success. Again, Farrar and Alford met the debaters of the S. A. K. and E. L. S., conquered them, and brought the trophy (a silver cup) into the hall of the M. C. C. where it is to remain permanently. The annual contests had not yet been passed. It was on May 27th, 1914, that the representatives of the Club established a record that could not be excelled. The Club was pronounced victorious in oratory, the Boys' and Girls' Quartettes and Declamation. The M. C. C. won everything that was to be won.

Through the recital of these victories it is shown that the Club is rising fast and living up to its motto: "THROUGH DIFFICULTIES TO THE SKIES."

SEEKERS AFTER KNOWLEDGE

During the first five years of the Normal School there were no literary societies. The necessity for work of this kind was discussed in a faculty meeting in the fall of 1890 and, as a result, Prof. R. L. Himes undertook the organization of such a society. He secured the interest of several other faculty members and a number of students who, on October 20th, 1890, organized the Seekers After Knowledge with Prof. Himes as president and sixty-eight charter members.

The object of the society is three-fold, to disseminate useful knowledge to its members, to train them in parliamentary practices, and to prepare them for active public work. The means of reaching this goal, which the Seekers After Knowledge have set up for themselves, is a weekly program which is rendered on Saturday night. These programs require careful preparation both on the part of the program committee and the persons who serve. Parliamentary law is given a place on almost every program, and an examination in rules of order is given to all persons before their graduation or before their becoming officers. The society is a training school for all candidates for citizenship, for there is an opportunity for learning how to lead and when to follow.

For the past two years the society has taken up special lines of work. In the fall term of 1914 the Seekers After Knowledge went on a trip around the world. Each Saturday night found them in a different country from the one that they had visited the previous week. Thus the members gained some knowledge of the government, social customs, literature and music of foreign countries.

During the twenty-four years in which S. A. K. has been a loving, working force in the Normal about two and a half thousand people have been members. These people are scattered throughout the state, and are ever ready to stand up for the white and gold.

MORTAR BOARD

Literary society work has always been a popular and stimulating form of Normal activity. As the student body grew in size year by year, such large numbers of students thronged the three society halls as to hamper the effectiveness of the work of the respective bodies. Their membership therefore was limited to those students in classes beyond the point at which high school graduates enter the course. This restriction debarred a large number of students from society work who otherwise would have been zealous and enthusiastic members. A need for general cooperative work among students of this class was realized, and the suggestion was made for the organization of an auxiliary or preparatory society in which, under intelligent supervision, the members would be trained in society work. The purpose of the proposed society was two-fold—to broaden and extend the mental horizon and experience of the student, and to prepare him for effective society work later in this course. The plan was enthusiastically received; and, aided by a committee from the faculty, the students of the lower terms organized, in October 1910, the Mortar Board Society, which since that time has been an important and useful factor of Normal life. The society is modeled on the same general lines as the older societies, giving elementary training in declamation, composition, debating, dramatics, Parliamentary usage and in editing a school paper.

Students who have been successful members of the Mortar Board enter the higher societies with a confidence and preparation impossible without the preliminary training. Those who have later achieved distinction as officers or in special lines of society work have often attributed their success to the early training they received in the hall of the Mortar Board Society.

MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS

THE NORMAL BAND

When one realizes the long period of apprenticeship and the talent necessary for one to become a successful member of a band it becomes apparent that a Normal School with its small proportion of men students and its short terms would not be likely to possess such an organization; yet The Louisiana State Normal School not only has a band but it has a good one. It is important to note that the band has been organized a sufficient length of time to insure its permanent life as a self supporting, voluntary student activity.

The band has not discontinued rehearsals nor disbanded for any reason since April 12, 1911. On that day in response to a call for volunteers to start the band sixteen boys met and made their first attempt to force music out of instruments of which they scarcely knew the name. H. W. Stopher, N. B. Voiers, R. A. Metoyer and E. L. McClung are the only remaining members of the original sixteen. The membership has varied from term to term but it has been possible to pick a band of twenty-five or thirty good players at any time since the fall of 1911.

The band began with instruments valued at $500 owned by the town of Natchitoches. It now owns or controls property valued at $3,500. The instruments belonging to the band are as follows: C. Clarinet, B. flat C. Clarinet, Bassoon, four Saxaphones, two B flat Cornets, four Altos, one French Horn, one Baritone, two Trombones, four Basses, and two Drums. Nearly every instrument is kept in a substantial case to insure protection which is very necessary in traveling.

The present instrumentation of the band is as follows: two Flutes, Oboe, C Clarinet, E flat Clarinet, eight B flat Clarinets, Bassoon, four Saxaphones, E flat Cornet, seven B flat Cornets, five Altos, Euphonium, five Trombones, four Basses and three Drums. The band will eventually add more wood instruments and make it conform strictly to the U. S.A. idea.

The Normal Band owns cadet gray and white duck uniforms and dusters for traveling.

One of the best services the band performs for the school is to encourage the athletic spirit by playing at the games. This help the boys take a delight in giving at all times.

The band practices in two sections, the beginners being known as the cadet band and those of more experience and ability as the concert band. One of the biggest student enterprises of the year is the annual anniversary concert for which a hundred hard and painstaking rehearsals are held.

Each year concert trips have been taken to towns within reach of Natchitoches. The band has visited the following places: Friendship, Campti twice, Marthaville, Robeline twice Pineville, Alexandria, State Fair twice, Annual Encampment W. O. W. at Shreveport 1914 one week, Boyce, Pelican, Mansfield, Sodus and assisted in school entertainments at Montrose and Bayou Natchez. The band played at twenty different occasions on Normal Hill during 1914. It has travelled more than a thousand miles.

The actual playing repertoire of the band includes more than fifty marches, twenty waltzes, and thirty overtures and operatic selections. During the week's engagement at Shreveport, by actual count the band gave eighty-five different pieces of music.

The band prides itself upon the fact that it is a self governing organization, and that the self government scheme has worked the most efficiently when under the greatest stress. The officers are the same as in the U. S. A. The present corps is as follows: Chief Musician H. W. Stopher, Principal Musician, M. J. Buatt, Chief Trumpeter C. B. McClung, Sergeant Bernard Nelken, First Corporal Paul Cancienne, Second Corporal George Morris, Quartermaster Sergeant R. A. Metoyer. The Sergeant is chairman of all the meetings of the corps of officers.

The work of instructing the band has been done by Mr. H. W. Stopher. Concrete results of the value of his work have been shown in the fact that members of this band are able to play in the bands or orchestras which they find or organize when they go out to teach.

THE CHORAL CLUB

From the earliest times the art of singing together in groups has been practiced by the people of every nation. That the wonderful growth of America musically during the last twenty years is due in no small part to the work done by the thousands of choral societies scattered throughout the land, has been recognized by the leading musicians. There is scarcely a city of any size, or a college of any importance that does not foster and support a chorus of some kind.

The Choral Society of the State Normal School under the direction of Mr. Harold R. Harvey, director of the School of Music, is promoting among the students an unusual interest in the best music in choral literature, and also giving them such training as will enable them, as they go out over the state as teachers, to raise the musical standard of the towns in which they live. At the beginning of the fall term the number enrolled was one hundred. That the interest has been steadily growing is shown by the fact that at the beginning of the winter term the number enrolled was one hundred and eighty-five.

The society made its debut for this year at the fall term graduation exercises, singing the "Lovely Appear" from the Redemption by Gounod. The soprano soloist was Miss Elizabeth Taylor, a member of the graduating class, and a pupil in the School of Music. The excellent work done by both soloist and chorus was a delight to the large audience gathered in the Normal Auditorium. The following week the society appeared again on the occasion of the public recital given by the students of the School of Music. On this occasion a "Lullaby" by Brahms and "I would that my Love" by Mendelssohn were effectively sung.

Rehearsals have begun on choruses from the opera "Aida," and the society will soon begin the study of "The Chimes of Normandy" by Planquette. This opera will probably be given at the end of the spring term.

PUBLICATIONS

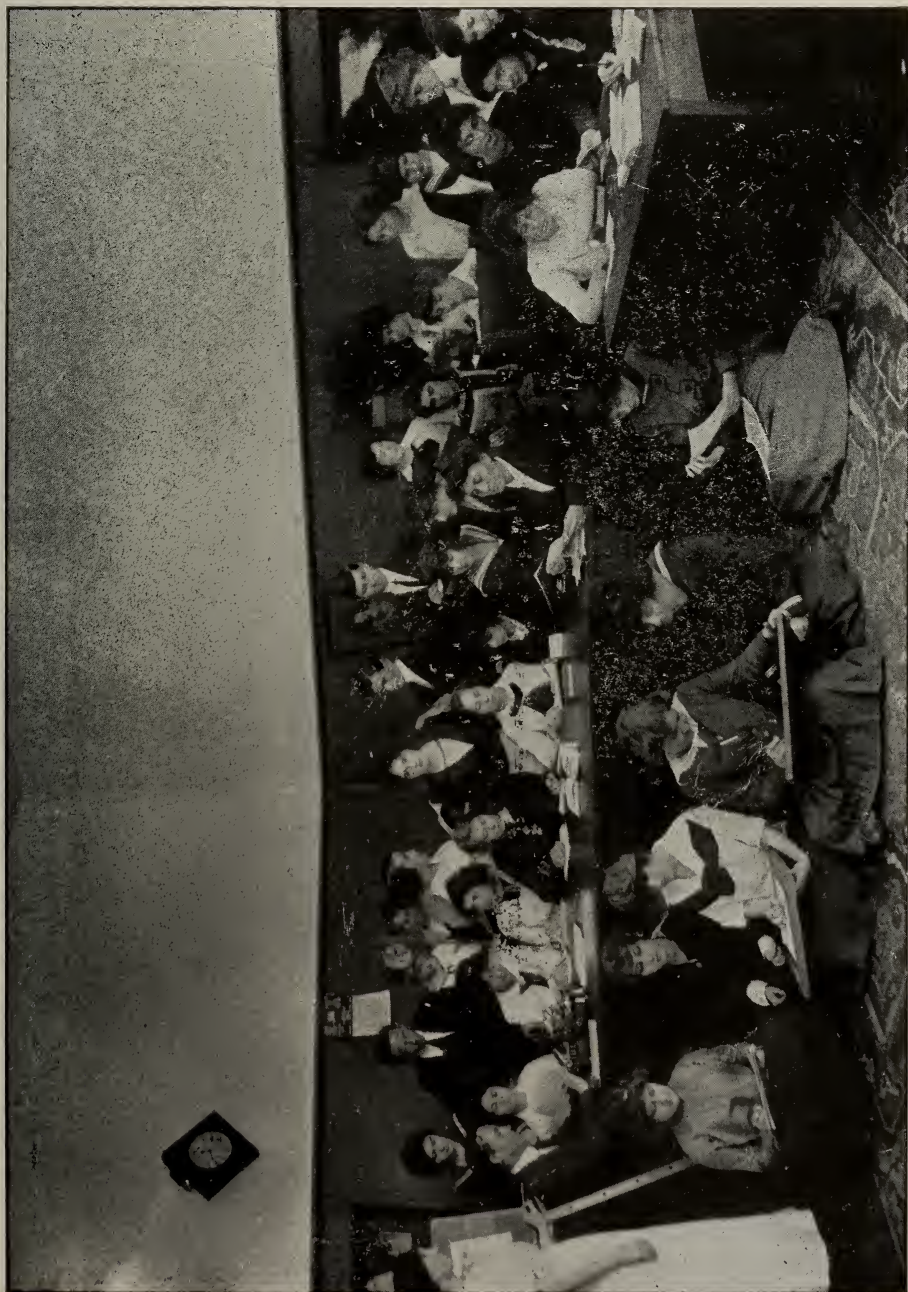

CURRENT SAUCE

With all its student activities The Hill finds a newspaper a necessity, and that newspaper must reflect every phase of the student's life. It must give the news and, at the same time, furnish an outlet for the expression of the best thought of the student body. It must be interesting to the average student, and it must lead to broader and higher interests. In fact, it must be representative and yet march in the first rank. It must be like the banner on which is written that for which the group stands and, like the banner, it must be followed as a guide.

Such a paper is Current Sauce, the six page bi-weekly publication of the Contemporary Life Club. While only one year old it has meant so much to the school community that one wonders how the students in the past got along without it. It is truly the pulse of the Normal school, the outward register of its heartbeats.

VOX DISCIPULORUM

For the members of the Latin Club and all others who are interested in that classic language a monthly newspaper of four pages is issued. It represents the work of the students in the Latin department and, being printed in that language, it furnishes an entertaining means of practice and adds greater interest to that which the Latin students already feel in their subject.

POTPOURRI

And what is Potpourri? Just mention the word at the State Normal during the winter and spring quarters when everybody is busy with Potpourri, and faces will brighten and the answer will quickly come: "That is our annual. The word means lots of things, but to us it means a mixture, a rose-jar-full of laughter and sobs, and friendship and loyalty; of games and practice-teaching, passes and failures, and everything else that is Normal, all mixed and crushed into the most fragrant whole. It is a rose-jar we shall keep through all the years, and often in that life out in the state we shall lift the cover and get a whiff of the aroma of the memories of the Normal. Between smiles and tears, we shall live again in fancy those brief years; we shall recall to mind some dear friend, some happy hour, some disappointment or ordeal, so trying now, but which will then have been softened by the years. The memories of Normal days will come thronging; we shall love the old Hill and its life more than ever, and we shall go back into that life refreshed and made better by our brief reliving of olden times. All this is what we try to put into each year—this is Potpourri!"

From the beginning, the business management of the annual, as well as the literary, was put largely into the hands of the pupils, the business manager being selected from one of the higher classes. However, in 1913, the faculty voted to turn over the entire work of issuing the Potpourri to the three higher literary societies, the Seekers After Knowledge, the Eclectic Literary Society, and the Modern Culture Club. The three business managers, one from each society, work together, with a member of the faculty as business adviser. The editors-in-chief of the Art and Literary Departments, and one of the associate literary editors are chosen from the school at large; the three other associate literary editors, from their respective societies; while the remainder of the art and literary staffs are selected from the classes, with society representation as nearly equal as possible. This plan worked exceedingly well in 1913-14 and even better results are expected this year.

As a student activity, Potpourri is easily the leading one. Willing, eager, ambitious, the staff works enthusiastically for the success of the Potpourri, and the same general spirit may be found among the other pupils. The work is so organized that almost every member of a class has something to do with Potpourri. Every person is called on to contribute his quota to the school's book, and he usually does it in a splendid spirit. For this reason, perhaps, the Potpourri touches the lives of more people than any other student activity. It satisfies to some extent that longing for self-expression which exists to some degree in every human soul; it collects and keeps the best of Normal traditions, customs and ideals; it binds the classes and the school together in a common interest; and, what is more to be desired, it lays a stronger foundation for loyalty and school spirit in the years to come. Imperfect as it may be, Potpourri to the Normal boys and girls is indeed their "rose-jar" to make and to keep.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

APOSTLESHIP OF PRAYER

In 1906 the members of the faculty and girls of the Catholic faith decided to lay the foundations of a branch of the great, universal Catholic league of the Apostleship of Prayer. Every Sunday afternoon a meeting of the organization is held for the purpose of bringing the Catholic girls together religiously and socially, helping the poor and needy, and giving a quiet hour of prayer to each girl to strengthen her in her Christian life.

At the meetings of the Apostleship of Prayer hymns are sung, prayers are said, and articles of value from the three Catholic papers for which the society subscribes are read.

A small fee is collected from each member every term for the purpose of subscribing to the Catholic journals and of sending aid to the Lepers Home.

By the earnest work of its members the Apostleship of Prayer has won its way and has become a true student activity.

Y. M. C. A.

Realizing the need of the influence of some religious organization among the men students of the Normal, the present Y. M. C. A. was organized in June 1913. During the summer term of that year, the work consisted principally of lectures given by various members of the faculty, but during the fall term the interest among the boys had grown to such an extent that they assumed the responsibility of the work.

Through the suggestion of Mr. Morgan, a visiting Y. M. C. A. secretary, the boys were awakened to the necessity of having delegates at the Y. M. C. A. convention held in Mont Ne, Ark., in June 1914. Three delegates represented the local organization at that convention, the influence of which has made itself felt in the superior work accomplished afterwards.

One of the main purposes of the Y. M. C. A. is to give the boys such work as will cause them to become interested in church work so that when they go out into the state they will take an active part in that work which is so essential to the uplift of humanity.

In order that they may get this training they have been studying "The Manhood of The Master," one of the books suggested by the National Students' Y. M. C. A. program committee. Not only do members try to obtain a training in a religious way, but they are now becoming interested in some of the South's greatest social problems, such as the negro question. Each term there is also a lecture on some vital question, the last being "Choosing One's Life Work" by Rev. McQueen.

Altogether the work has been decidedly helpful to the boys, not only as a builder of character but in a cultural way as well.

Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. was organized in the Louisiana State Normal School in the spring of 1911. Its purpose is to promote spiritual, intellectual and physical developments in the school.

The local association has been raised to the level of other associations in the Southern field by having its officers elected yearly and dues paid once a year instead of by the term.

Regular meetings of the Y. W. C. A. are held every Sunday evening. The Bible is studied from the beginning, and each night a story in its regular time-order is told by one of the members; the aim being, to gain a thorough and complete knowledge of the Scriptures. There is a Y. W. C. A. choir now which renders selections that are very much enjoyed every Sunday night.

The Association has a beautiful, large reading-room in East Hall, which does a great deal to foster the social and intellectual side of school life. This room is open to the girls of the boarding club every day after school and on Saturday. Here, all entertainments for the Y. W. C. A. are given when only Association members are invited.

Last year two delegates were sent to the Blue Ridge Conference but this year the hope is to double the number.

The Association is visited once a year by the Field Secretary. This year Miss Frances Y. Smith, from St. Louis, was here. She gave two very inspiring talks, one to the cabinet and one to the members and friends of the Association, both aiding much in strengthening the work of the Y. W. C. A. at the Normal.

SOCIAL AND RECREATIONAL

While in the contests and receptions of the various organizations as well as in the commencement exercises and classes, the social element plays its part; and while the social life of the students is not suppressed as in some institutions, the great social event of each term is the mammoth reception or entertainment in which all students and faculty members participate. The form of entertainment varies each term, and may be anything from a reception to a picnic; but, in every case, it is democratic and is therefore enjoyed by all. In the spring of 1915 everyone will join in a May Day festival the queen of which will be selected at a popular election of the students.

The "Movie Man" has also found his way into the Normal and as the week's work nears its close everyone begins reading the advance notices of the photo play to be given Friday night. The pictures vary from light comedy to tragedy, but are always clean and often educational and uplifting. The Taming of the Shrew and Les Miserables were among the film plays seen at the Normal during the past year.

A STUDY OF THE EFFICIENCY OF LOUISIANA HIGH SCHOOLS.

During the summer of 1912, Mr. H. H. Ryan, then training teacher of the Normal School, undertook a study of the efficiency of Louisiana high schools. In this work he received the cooperation of the other members of the Normal faculty. The manner of pursuing the investigation was explained in the October number, 1912, of the Normal Quarterly (Vol. I, No. 4), and is here briefly restated.

The plan of procedure required every instructor in the school to list in order of excellence the students in each of his classes, beginning with the 5th term or class, which is the point at which high school graduates enter the Normal School. The order of students on the lists was to be the poorest first, and the best last, with all other names arranged between first and last, in order of excellence.

Each list upon being received was graded on the basis of 1000; that is, the best student on each list was given a rating in the subject concerned of 1000. The other students were rated proportionately. If a given list, for instance, carried 40 names, the student-interval was 25, the first or poorest student was graded 25, the next 50, and so on to the last. When this grading was completed, the several subject-ratings of each student were averaged, and this average constituted that student's general rating.

During the summer of 1915, this study was resumed by Mr. A. M. Hopper of the Normal faculty. The same general plan has been followed by Mr. Hopper as was used by Mr. Ryan in obtaining the ratings of the students.

The purpose is now to continue this investigation through successive quarters, with a view of gathering sufficient data upon which to base reliable conclusions. A study covering only one term may lead to conclusions as to the efficiency of the schools under study which are unreliable, because of the personal element in the data; but, when an estimate of a school is based upon the records of a score of students covering several terms, it is reasonable to assume that it is measurably reliable. For these reasons, the study made in the summer school of 1915 is not published in full.

Twenty-four high schools of the State were represented in the summer school by three or more students in the normal department. The following table gives the names of the high schools whose students averaged a higher rating than 500.

The number of students whose records entered into the study made this summer is 285. The rating of student No. 143, who occupies a position midway down the list, is 515 and is the median. Thirty-one students have ratings higher than 800; ten have ratings higher than 900. The twelve students with the highest ratings are as follows:—

In order to endeavor to place an estimate on the quality of instruction given in the schools of the several parishes, the ratings of the students were averaged for each parish separately, leaving out of consideration all parishes represented by fewer than six students. The table following gives the data thus obtained; but it should be understood that, in as much as this study covers but one quarter or term, it offers, not a reliable criterion of the quality of public school training, but rather an estimate of the individual diligence and studiousness during the term of the students concerned.

IMPORTANCE OF TRAINED TEACHERS.

In every state system of education the training of teachers is now and must continue to be one of its chief functions. The reason for this is not difficult to understand. The teacher is the very foundation stone of the school; and unless he is adequately trained for his work, the child must suffer as a result. The untrained teacher may, in the course of years, attain a fair degree of skill and efficiency in his work, but always at an appalling cost in educational results to the children he teaches.

If it were possible to reckon in dollars and cents the cost to the State of training teachers in the school-room and at the educational expense of the child, there can be no doubt that the figures would be appalling, and would far exceed the monetary cost involved in a professional course for teachers. It is because in the former case the loss to the child is not easily discerned and an immediate saving is effected at a cost which is remote and not readily apparent, that unprofessional boards and officials continue a practice so expensive in educational results to the child.

Every child in the State is entitled by virtue of his American citizenship to instruction at the hands of a professionally trained teacher; and under no circumstances is it morally right either in a superintendent, a school board or a community to employ the precious years of the life of the child in developing an efficiency in teachers that could far more readily, economically and thoroughly be obtained in a training school. Every professionally efficient superintendent feels keenly the truth of this statement; and he never sanctions the employment of untrained teachers when conditions are such as will permit him to command the services of professional teachers.

Ordinarily the superintendent understands the importance and value of a corps of trained teachers far more thoroughly than do his people, although in recent years there have developed among the patrons of our schools a very gratifying recognition and appreciation of the worth of trained teachers. The superintendent is able, because of his experience and skill in supervision, to estimate at their true worth, not only the immediate and visible results of the teacher's labors, but those more intangible fruits of his endeavors which only slowly manifest themselves in character building and the up-rearing of a more efficient manhood and womanhood for the State.

More and more, therefore, as the years go by, will the parish superintendents of Louisiana insist upon the employment of trained teachers in all the schools under their supervision; and, in order that desirable men and women may be drawn into this field of labor, the financial inducements offered the teacher will continue to increase.

THE CURRICULA OF THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

The one purpose of our State in establishing the Louisiana State Normal School thirty years ago remains its one purpose today; and that is to train teachers. In fulfilling its mission, the institution seeks not to train teachers in a haphazard way, qualifying them merely to enter the school-room without the necessity of undergoing examination; but rather to prepare them to be truly efficient from the beginning of their careers, and particularly to give them a broad professional foundation upon which to build increasing efficiency as the years go by.

In the two years comprising the normal course offered to high school graduates, it is impossible to equip any individual with a general training qualifying him to teach in every department of the public schools. Even the field of the common and high schools is to-day so broad that the principle of specialization must be applied in normal training. To attempt to give a general course covering the whole field would result in a shallow and smattering knowledge, making for inefficiency and poor service.

For these reasons, the Louisiana State Normal School has in recent years divided its curriculum into eight special courses, each one of which has been designed to prepare those pursuing it for a particular field of service. These eight courses train teachers for the following lines of work, to-wit:—primary grades, grammar grades, rural schools, music and art, home economics, science and mathematics, social sciences and the languages.

Professional Subjects.

In order that the students of the several courses may be adequately trained in the necessary professional branches, certain subjects are offered which all students are required to pursue. These subjects are psychology (two terms), general method, special methods, history of education, school laws and management, observation of class-room practice, and practice teaching (two terms).

The effect of these courses is to give the student a comprehensive grasp of educational problems and practice, and to lend a professional aspect to all his work in the Normal School. It develops a teaching atmosphere, in which he moves and has his being; and gradually he comes to view the work of the teacher from a professional standpoint. Thus a broad foundation is laid upon which the intending teacher may safely build in his subsequent career.

Special Subjects.

In each of the eight courses, certain subjects are offered, the purpose of which is to give a specialized knowledge which is considered essential to success in the particular field of education for which the course is intended to prepare teachers. It must not be inferred that the school claims to cover fully this field of special subjects. Indeed, it would be presumptuous to make such a claim when the course covers only two years beyond a high school education.

Primary Course.

The purpose of this course is to train special teachers for the lower grades. A course in primary methods given prior to the practice teaching of the last two quarters gives an abundance of material and approved methods for successful work in the class-room. The practice teaching of the students in this department is done in the lower grades of the training school under the guidance of experts. The importance of rote songs and sight singing as part of the equipment of teachers in elementary grades led to the introduction of a course of three terms in public school music. A parallel course in drawing has been included on account of the importance of such training to primary teachers. For similar reasons the course comprises handcraft, geography and nature study, besides several terms in English and other scholastic subjects.

Course for Teachers of Grammar Grades.

Here a review is given in several intermediate grade subjects, notably United States history, arithmetic, English grammar, geography, and physiology and hygiene. Other subjects of the course are advanced American history (two terms), nature study or physiology, sociology and three electives.

Music and Art Course.

Besides the subjects which are required in all courses (which are the professional subjects enumerated above, and U. S. history, physiology and hygiene English composition and grammar, English literature and discourse, and sociology), the course in music and art comprises two full years in these two subjects. The branches taught in the music department are sight-reading, primary material and ensemble drill, directing and program study, harmony, music appreciation, and special method in public school music. The art work includes three-month courses in color work, perspective, study of the human figure, landscape composition, applied design, black-board drawing, and special method in drawing.

Course in Home Economics.

The special subjects in this course are advanced arithmetic, economics, sewing (three terms), textiles, cooking (three terms), food chemistry, dietetics, and method of teaching the household arts.

Course for Rural Teachers.

One term courses are here offered in botany, gardening, elementary general agriculture, handcraft, farm arithmetic, animal husbandry, dairying, soils and fertilizers, rural economics, rural sociology, and nature study. Besides, the young men of the course are required to pursue four separate courses in manual training, and the young ladies four courses in sewing and cooking.

Training High School Teachers.

Three courses are offered for the training of high school teachers. These are the language, the science and mathematics, and the social science courses. In each of these courses, special emphasis is laid on advanced scholastic training in the departments in which the students intend to teach.

Course in Languages.

The two foreign languages taught are French and Latin, each of which is taught a full year beyond the high school. The Latin course extends through four books of Vergil and includes some work in Eutropius, Sallust and Livy. Advanced courses in American history and all the English work of the school are also required of the language students.

Science and Mathematics Course.

The science part of the course consists of advanced work either in botany and zoology or in physics and chemistry. In each of these sciences two terms are offered, the work in chemistry, for instance, consisting of qualitative analysis and organic chemistry including organic preparations. Physiography and sociology are required subjects.

The mathematics of the course covers one term in each of the following: advanced arithmetic, college algebra, trigonometry, analytic geometry, differential calculus and integral calculus.

Social Science Course.

The special subjects of this course are as follows: one term each in civics, general economics, rural economics, American history, the American Revolution, and the Civil War. Fiske's Critical Period and Wilson's Division and Reunion are the text-books employed in the last named subjects.

NORMAL SUMMER SCHOOL, 1916.

The 1916 summer school of the Louisiana State Normal School, Natchitoches, La., will open on May 31, 1916, at 8 A. M., with the registration and classification of students. Regular class-room instruction will begin the following day.

So far as can now be determined, the 1916 summer school will be similar in the main to the 1915 term; that is, students will have the privilege of attending six, eight, or ten weeks. Six weeks' attendance and satisfactory work will entitle one to a five per cent. certificate; eight weeks, a six per cent. certificate; and ten weeks a seven per cent. certificate.

Courses of Study.

The courses of study of the 1916 summer school will be of three kinds, as follows:

1. Instruction under the best and most successful teachers of the State in all subjects in which applicants for certificates are examined.
2. Full courses in every department of the State Normal School, as presented during the other quarters of the year.
3. Advanced graduate courses in education, chemistry, physics, mathematics, French, Latin and industrial branches, for the benefit of Normal graduates and other advanced students.

Expenses.

As heretofore, the living expenses in the normal boarding club will be $3.00 per week. The laundry charge is 50 cents per week, and the infirmary fee is $1.00 for the term. The incidental fee in every case is $2.00 for the term. Hence the necessary expenses in the summer school will be

For six weeks.....$24.00.

For eight weeks.....$31.00.

In the normal department, the summer term covers ten weeks, and the expenses amount to $38. To this should be added a fee of $1.00 by those who pursue laboratory courses, or $2.00 by those who take cooking.

The cost of text-books is not included in the foregoing estimates. Summer school students ordinarily bring their books from home, as the adopted books of the public schools are used. Normal students purchase their books at the normal book store at a cost ranging from $3.00 to $6.00 for the term.

Attractive Features of the Summer School.

1. The Normal School presents a "teaching atmosphere" that has no parallel in Louisiana. This leads all students to view the teacher's work from a professional standpoint, and to develop that professional attitude which is so much in demand by the superintendents and school boards of Louisiana.

2. Constant association with a large faculty of expert teachers and with more than a thousand men and women whose business in life consists of teaching, develops the viewpoint and vision which distinguish the true teacher from the pedagogic opportunist.

3. Because the Normal School has a history extending more than thirty years into the past and its campus and halls have been trod by tens of thousands of students, many of whom have taken prominent parts in shaping the educational destiny of Louisiana, a vast and permanent inspiration is derived from attending the institution.

4. Not only is every effort made to provide the best educational facilities for the large body of summer school students; but all possible comforts, conveniences, facilities and diversions are provided. Electric fans in the class rooms and dining hall ensure comfort on the most sultry days; abundant shade, a large study hall, a commodious library and a large assembly tent provide ample convenience for day study; a large swimming pool, with free instruction in swimming, a dozen tennis courts, baseball grounds, volley ball courts, folk dancing, and courses in games and play, furnish opportunities for physical exercise; and carefully selected educational moving pictures on Saturday evenings provide a delightful entertainment at the close of the week's labor.

5. With the great object of the summer school, which is the preparation of candidates for the teachers' examinations, nothing is allowed to interfere. Expert assistance is given students in planning their courses. Numerous sections are formed in each of the common subjects, so as to offer each student exactly the instruction he needs; thus in 1915, arithmetic and algebra were each taught in eight sections; grammar in seven, and penmanship in twelve. Opportunities are given students to receive assistance from instructors after school hours. And all class-room teaching is done by men and women who have had a wide and successful experience in public school work and in the training of teachers.
